Will Eisner 1972

SNARF Line-up

COVER: Readers are treated to a glimpse of our subterranean headquarters, as drawn by none other than WILL EISNER himself, famed creator of The Spirit and other costumed heroes.

Hippies really take a beating this issue. PETER POPLASKI and ED GOODMAN team up in our lead story to show the amazing transformation of Bucky Wright from rich boy to longhair radical.

TOM CHRISTOPHER follows with Adventures of the Omnipotent Dwarf, who crosses paths later in the book with those fumbling soldiers of fortune, Lenny and Phil.

DENIS KITCHEN and ED GOODMAN introduce a regular feature, "Ramshackle & Slumlord Realty." Typical American landlords at play.

EVERT GERADTS' "Ma Cow" returns in an udderly ridiculous tale of Ma's attempts to avoid Pa's cattle prod. But Pa gets his in the end.

Dead Ledder, PETE LOFT'S bird-brained mailman, is used to losing U.S. mail. But this time he loses a kid.

POPLASKI and KITCHEN parody Mary Worth, Nancy, and some of your other favorite newspaper comic strips.

And TIM BOXELL brings up the rear with a perverse observation of teenage love.

Bucky Wright

BOY RADICAL

THIS IS BUCKY WRIGHT. HE IS 17 AND LIVES WITH FOUR CARS, FIVE COLOR TVS, A GARDENER, TWO MOTOR BOATS, A DAY MAID, ONE SET OF MONOGRAMMED GOLF CLUBS, FOUR HORSES, ONE SET OF PARENTS AND A STATELY ESTATE.

ONE DAY HE DECIDED TO RENOUNCE HIS MATERIALISTIC HERITAGE AND BECOME ONE WITH THE LONGHAIRS, AND BEARDED STREET PEOPLE. AND SO, BUCKY BECAME A RADICAL!
